

Annual Meeting Agric. Society

FINANCIAL STATEMENT AND REPORT PRESENTED TO MEM- BERS SAT. LAST

Although the gathering which the society held on Saturday was not as large as might have been hoped for those of the Wainwright agricultural society were at least enthusiastic.

In giving his report for the past year the president pointed out many features which the casual observer might not have noticed. The increase in the amount of prize money paid out; the increased number of members; the influence brought to bear upon other angles of community life and progress; by the society; were all stressed in this report, and showed an intimate knowledge of the powers of such a body.

The report was listened to with respect, attention, and at the close a motion that it be adopted and that the recommendations and suggestions contained therein be brought to the attention of the incoming directors was adopted unanimously.

Secretary J. Stuart presented the financial balance sheet for the year 1929 and the auditor's report thereon and this statement reads as follows:—

After the statement had been fully discussed and the actual status of the society shown to be in really better shape than in many former years despite the serious crop situation of 1929 a motion to adopt the report was passed.

A motion of condolence with the relative of the late Mr. A. L. Greenwood a director of the society was ordered spread upon the minutes and a copy sent to the bereaved.

It was decided after the matter had been discussed from several angles that the Secretary should be the delegate to the annual convention of Alberta Pairs Association, with the President as the alternate delegate and also that the date of the Wainwright fair for 1930 should be left in the hands of the delegate to obtain the most satisfactory date for this event.

LOCAL NOTES

Miss Bonnie and Grace Welch are expected home from variety to spend the holidays with their parents in town.

Messrs Wells and Shearer who have charge here for the Calgary Power Co. for some time have now been moved to other points. Mr. Wells goes to Hardisty and Mr. Shearer to Provost to take charge separately of those districts of the company's lines.

Here lies the body of old Joe Jay He died while claiming the right of way. Joe was right as he was along; But he's just as dead as though he were wrong and the roads are slippery. You may be careful but the other fellow is not and you might get hurt. Carry accident and car insurance with Joe Welch.

LOCAL REBEKAHS HOLD WHIST DRIVE

The local Rebekah lodge put on a whist drive on Wednesday last and the timely seasonable prizes, consisting of turkeys, geese and chickens drew a nice crowd to play. All present had an enjoyable evening and the prize winners were: Turkeys, Mrs. P. Guthrie and Mr. H. Anderson; geese, Miss M. Hefferman and Mr. T. Noden; chickens, Mrs. Clifton and Mr. W. Tansley. Mr. W. Frowder had the misfortune to lose in the cut for the second prize. After the cards a delightful lunch was served by a committee of the members of the lodge. We learn that this organization is arranging to hold a series of these pleasant gatherings throughout the winter.

In the election of officers for the coming year, a motion that the whole of the sitting officers (with the exception that Mr. A. J. Martin be added to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Mr. Greenwood) be re-elected on bloc was carried unanimously. This brought the influence brought to bear upon other angles of community life and progress; by the society; were all stressed in this report, and showed an intimate knowledge of the powers of such a body.

Thus ended the annual meeting for 1929, and although the strenuous weather no doubt kept away many who wished to attend, the business was despatched in such manner as proved the enthusiasm of those in attendance.

At the close of the general meeting the directors held their first meeting and confirmed the appointment of Mr. Stuart for another year as Secretary.

Local Notes

The first rural mail route from Wainwright is now in operation and twice a week Mr. Dave Jones, who has the contract makes the run between Elm Ridge and town. It is hoped that this convenience for our farm friends will be greatly extended in the near future, so that other districts can be included in the service.

Mr. R. McArthur was up from after, Alia, last week on a visit to friends for a day or two.

Mr. Lawrence Aykroyd who formerly resided here was in town for a couple of days at the week end.

BYLAW FOR FIRE PROTECT. CARRIES

DESPITE BAD WEATHER GOOD-LY NUMBER REGISTER THEIR INCLINATIONS

It would appear that the burgesses of Wainwright have surely made up their mind that it is imperative that the town receives attention necessary to provide the best obtainable at the moment in the matter of fire protection and to that end the vote registered on Thursday last is an indication that the Council should push this matter forward with all possible despatch.

Although the day was a far from pleasant one for getting around with the mercury hovering around the twenty below mark, no less than eighty-eight qualified voters visited the booth and the final count saw this number as sixty-eight for the bylaw and twenty against. There were no spoiled ballots at all.

The returning officers having made this declaration and the bylaw being duly passed, it should be long before a start on the actual work required to place the mains and such-like is commenced, and in this way, too, a portion of the unemployment problem (if not all of it) will be alleviated as well as a great step in the advancement of Wainwright as a progressive town being consummated.

Proving Expansion Wainwright Field

PROVING EXPANSION WESTERN END PRODUCES 40 MILLION GASSER DURING PAST WEEK

REFINERIES BOTH BUSY WELLS WINTER-HOUSED AND DRILLING CONTINUING THREE SHIFTS

F. E. Stevens is now down 1350 feet in contract drilling work on Bethwin No. 2 well. Processed crude is being used for fuel on this location and it is the intention to rush work to completion on this site providing the weather conditions remain favorable. Seventy Barrels Daily.

Tubing for Wainwell No. 4 well has not yet been received though it is expected to arrive at any time. No. 1 is now on the pump again and is expected to continue approximately 15 barrel production with some slight variation. Mr. M. J. Williamson who has been field manager and in charge of refinery work is leaving for Toronto where he will spend the Christmas holidays. Wainwell No. 2 huge gasser is now connected with the Wainwright gas company's main for use in town.

Lloyd's Still Riggings
The large boiler which arrived for Lloyd's Petroleum has now been hauled to location and will be put in place at once. It has not yet been decided whether work will be opened up on this site until milder weather.

Enlarging Our Field
Further increasing the size and enhancing the values of the Wainwright oil field was achieved on Friday when the Duhaime Syndicate drilling rig 5-2-10-4 which is about twelve miles northwest of Kinelsa slipped into a formation which catapulted a forty million foot flow of gas into the air the force of which threw considerable of their equipment out of place. The depth at which this was encountered is 2020 feet and there were very definite oil indications present also. This is considered by geologists as being of very valuable data towards the values of this field and its tremendous capacities.

It has not yet been definitely decided whether this well should be drilled at its present depth and the gas used for fuel purposes for the drilling of another hole immediately or whether the present hole will be continued to depth.

Sasko-Wainwright Refinery
Test has not yet been made of the results of recent coming-back work carried on by Sasko-Wainwright officials on British Wainwright well B.P. No. 3B, Edmonton-Wainwright and Sasko-Wainwright are being pumped regularly and the output refined at their associated refineries.

Fabyan Peto
Fabyan Petroleum recently reorganized, increasing their capitalization to three million and officials report that a new rotary equipment is to be purchased and shipped into the field for use on their No. 3 location not later than March 19th.

SQUARE TIMBER ORDERED
BY BRITISH ADMIRALTY
OTTAWA—White pine "timber" is being cut in Algoquin Park by J. R. Booth Ltd. of Ottawa to fill a special order from the British Admiralty.

These logs it is said represent some of the choicest timber in this great game reserve and the lumbering companies are the first in a number of years.

The present activity in Algoquin Park is reminiscent of the days when square timber formed the chief wealth of the Ottawa Valley. Great rafts of it were floated down the Ottawa and St. Lawrence rivers to Quebec for export.

Mr. F. Redgwell, the accountant, is in charge at the Bank of Montreal during the absence of manager Cuthbertson on annual holidays.

The new safe belonging to the Gilt Edge M.D. is to be moved from the Mascoit block to its new home in the municipal building this week. The new acquisition is so large it will be placed in the new building before its future home is all completed.

Mr. Stephenson of the Peninsula Oil is spending a few days in Calgary on business connected with his company.

Small Roasts
Are Wasteful

It is not economical to buy small roasts of beef. They should always be large enough to serve more than one meal. The reason is that too small a roast does not carve well and "dries up" in cooking. And the "left over" of dried, cooked meat are tasteless and not desirable in combination dishes. We take pride in our Premier Roasts of Beef, just as in the Premier Leg of Lamb. All are excellent and all are economical.

Yes, There Is A Santa

(Famous editorials written thirty years ago for little girl, who now wish all might believe it)

Remember Virginia O'Hanlon? The little girl of eight who had doubts about Santa Claus before Christmas of 1897 wrote to the New York Sun and was reassured through an editorial which has been reprinted and quoted more often than any other? Of course there is a Santa Claus, Frank Church, the writer of the editorial told Virginia, because the world would not get along without one. He has to exist, because Santa Claus stands for faith in the world lives by.

Such reasoning was over Virginia's head but now, 30 years later when she is a widow, with a daughter of 13 and is a school teacher besides the "little girl of the '90's" understandings and agrees.

"And I do wish" says this same Virginia O'Hanlon now "that it could be made easier for all children to be like in Santa Claus in the way that Mr. Church meant."

"My only doubt when I was small was about the identity of Santa Claus. Some of my playmates were skeptical. Their own parents were under suspicion. So I began to wonder whether my Christmas presents really came down the chimney and whether the stocking at the fireplace would be filled by a picturesque old fellow from the north pole."

"I think that every child should have the confidence and faith that are typified by a belief in Santa Claus. I don't mean that perfect trust in the integrity of parents which begins before a baby discovers the moon and the grass, and ice cream and Christmas and ends when he finds certain packages tucked away in the closet about the middle of December. That perfect trust is lovely and touching and something to make thoughtful parents feel meek and inadequate but it can pass without serious consequences. I mean belief in people and in the goodness of life and in the spirit of Christmas."

This grown-up Virginia thinks as she looks with her grave eyes of misty blue upon the Santa Claus doubters of today, is what the editor meant in his answer to her. This in part is what he said:

"Yes Virginia there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! how dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus! It would be as dreary as if there were not Virgins. There would be no childlike faith, then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished."

Since that was first printed letters have come to Virginia O'Hanlon every Christmas for the editorial was translated into many languages, even Chinese. These letters are addressed in her maiden name but they reach her at the house of her father, Dr. Philip O'Hanlon where Christmas is kept precisely as it was in 1897. There is a tree, and Laura Virginia, the daughter of that other Virginia hangs up her stockings.

In the course of the years Virginia O'Hanlon has become a legend. She who doubted Santa Claus is appealed to by lonely people whose faith in all things is shaken. To them she has become the symbol of trust and also of everlasting childhood for many of them seem to think that she is still only eight years old.

With her they feel that they can penetrate again the cherubic and mysterious kingdom of lullabies and nursery rhymes that is sealed to all unfortunate incapable of the Santa Claus belief—especially in a time when chimneys have gone out of fashion and Christmas trees are electric and bells pulled by reindeer are wisdom heard on the house tops.

The latest letter was from Australia. The writer had no notion that Virginia O'Hanlon was a college graduate with a degree of master of arts from Columbia university and a position as assistant principal in the public schools.

The widow who was Virginia O'Hanlon in 1897 and who wishes her present name withheld from this article still lives in West Ninety-fifth street New York. The house is only two blocks from the address that appeared in her letter to the editor. A slender woman of a charm decidedly girlish she shrinks from public attention, in stating that she only made an occasion for a bit of Christmas writing that has stood the test of years so well.

THE BIRDS HAVE A CHRISTMAS TOO

Most "once upon a time" stories are only fairy tales but this year one of them is really coming true. It is a pleasant story, this one, about a boy who thought of a way to give a Christmas festival for the birds.

It was the day after Christmas in a small town in the middle-west and a twelve year old boy was standing in front of the gayly decorated Christmas tree in his home. There were many pretty trinkets and colored ornaments on the tree and candy and sweets. The thing that attracted his attention though was a glass bird gayly perched on the topmost branch. There was a sugar cane hanging on the limb below and it seemed to the boy that the bird was trying to reach down and peck it.

The boy was thinking that in a few days the pretty tree would have to be discarded and he was wondering what he could do with it. One doesn't like to just toss a Christmas tree aside and in these modern days only a few people have a fire place in which a Christmas tree can end its career in a blaze of glory.

Suddenly a thought came to him. The Christmas season was the time for doing Good Turns for others. Why not remember the birds too? He could plant the Christmas tree and have a festival for the birds.

A few days later with much ceremony the boys of the neighborhood planted the rootless Christmas tree. It had been cleared of ornaments and tinsel, but upon each branch was fastened a choice morsel for the birds. A piece of dried bread, a small basket of dried corn a small perch suspended a box of rice and bird seed and scattered under the tree handfuls of dainties for the birds to eat.

Throughout the winter months while the ground was covered with snow and the birds had difficulty in getting food a whole flock of feathered folks enjoyed the daily replenished festival around the Christmas tree.

The boy who first thought of the Christmas festival for birds is unknown, but this year in many parts of the country Boy Scouts are taking up the pleasant task of planting their Christmas trees after Christmas and of providing a banquet for the birds. Why not try it in your neighborhood?

The Many Tongues Of Christmastide

Christmas is an institution and a spirit too good to let die. The story of the Christ Child is the sweetest story in the world and it has never become stale. When a little child hears it for the first time he loves it and holds it. For centuries wise and simple alike hail the joyful wonder of the cradle at Bethlehem as the fitting prelude to the tragic wonder of the cross.

The tale of the first Christmas morning is that heavenly messenger have manifested themselves in earthly sphere; heaven and earth are bound together. God and man are kin: the spiritual is linked to the material. The Word or Expression of God is uttered through a human being. The religious message of Christmas is fundamental "Glory be to God in the Highest" is first in order; then come goodwill and among men; and only then can peace abide.

Some do not definitely recognize this religious basis, yet gladly proclaim and obey the behest of the Christmas message. They would readily agree with Charles Dickens when he said: "I have always thought of Christmas-time, apart from the veneration due to its sacred name and origin—if anything belonging to it can be apart from that—as a good time, a kind, forgiving, charitable, pleasant time."

The institution which can create such a spirit even for one day is worth preserving. Christmas speaks to me with many tongues and every tongue has its own significance.

1. It speaks with the tongue of rejuvenation. There is a new beginning for the race. The Calendar of Christendom teaches us to date our years not from the first Good Friday or Easter but from Christmas. Since the birth of Christ, and by it, a new beginning has been made in the history and every year may be designated a fresh Annus Domini year of the Lord.

2. It speaks with the tongue of deep mystery, mystery not of darkness, but of light. From the nature of the case the wisest and the simplest must kneel in wonder before this real manifestation of God, the Almighty, in flesh. The incarnation gives us the nearer vision of God. The invitation of the season is not: "O come let us explain Him," but: "O come let us adore Him."

3. It speaks with the tongue of Love. It is the sign of God's sympathy with His creatures. His desire to come near to them. His love has embraced all human experiences from infancy to death. "The divine became human that the human may become divine." So said one of the early Fathers of the Church. Love gives itself and longs to possess the answering love of its beloved. Christ in God's unspoken gift to us. All Christmas giving rests upon the self-giving of God. Christmas love seeks to give to those whom we love to those who are in bread, seeking for naught in return.

4. It speaks with the tongue of humility. It brings home to us the picture of one who "became poor" for our sake. As we remember the example of this great humility we dare not keep the feast in pride. The poverty of the birth does not chase again the greatest things of life are bound up with abundance of material goods. "Simplicity" of life is commendable; it is a thing of the spirit; and it is taught by the circumstances of the infant Christ.

5. It speaks with the tongue of thanksgiving. In return for God's inestimable gift to us, how can we show our gratitude? And for all the blessings of this life, for friends, for children, for cheer, for opportunities, for achievements, Christmas bids us thank our Heavenly Father. We gather in homes made bright by His presence; we are linked by loving thoughts to friends and kindred now far away; we remember our beloved dead who are safe in the heavenly land and surely they in Christ remember us and send us a message of good cheer. All the associations of the season bid us be thankful.

6. It speaks with the tongue of forgiveness. It gives to friends the opportunity of speaking out their mutual affection and to those estranged the opportunity of reconciliation. When angels sing "Peace on Earth and Mercy Mild" can we not bury our grudges and sweeten our resentments. Let us pray for grace to forgive those who have annoyed us, even as we humbly pray to be ourselves forgiven by God.

7. It speaks with the tongue of eternal childhood. It is pre-eminently the feast of the little ones. That is why the Spirit of Christmas persists and remains the same. Childhood means innocence, simplicity, affection, nearness to God. It means also promise, growth, development, the beginning of a process of spiritual progress the end of which is not yet. All the win some glories of Home grow out of the spirit of Christmas.

Xmas Memories For Others

By Florence Harris Wells

"Hark! the Herald Angels sing, Glory to the new-born King!"
The Christmas chimes were pealing overhead as Mrs. Peggy Walton hurried past the great department store. A lump rose in Peggy's throat. Her eyes grew misty. She wondered if all these hurrying Christmas shoppers heard those chimes, and if they did, their faces gave no evidences of emotion, but neither did hers, Peggy assured herself.

Communing with herself, Peggy thought of other Christmas shopping expeditions when all was joy and an anticipation. But that was when Bob was little and the four grandparents and two aunts were all coming for the holiday festivities to the big brick house in the little town. Now Bob was twenty-one, the grandparents had passed away—Grandmother Walton and Grandmother Prentiss had gone just a short time apart the past summer. The two aunts felt as Peggy, that Christmas memories would be less poignant if they didn't try to have the customary reunion. And instead of the big brick house with its cheery fireplaces, in the friendly little town, they lived in an apartment in the city. Not much Christmas atmosphere about an apartment.

But something must be done about Christmas for Bob's sake, if for no other reason. It wouldn't seem much like Christmas for Bob to come home from college for just her and dad.

Peggy had passed beyond the sound of the chimes, but between shopping ventures her mind dwelt constantly on this Christmas problem and what she could do. All their friends had their own families at Christmas, just as they had theirs until this year.

That brought her back again to the little town and the many changes that had taken place even in the short time they had been gone. Other homes besides theirs would miss the older generation this Christmas. Peggy began enumerating them in her mind.

There was Judge Hatford who had done so much for them when the first ork had come, and her own father had passed away, and even last summer too, when her mother had gone. It was Judge Hatford who had taken the sting from the legal aspects. Yet it was but a few weeks later when he had been laid to rest in the little cemetery on the hill, then there was genial courtly Mr. Morrow, and Mr. and Mrs. Roberts, separated from each other but a brief month, and Mr. and Mrs. Dawson—Peggy stopped in her summary. Why hadn't she thought of the Dawson's before? There was Fred Morrow and Kathleen and the little boy Dick and Kathleen's younger sister Mary; they too must be looking forward to Christmas with sorrowful memories; for always they had come from the far-off city to the home in the little town for the holidays and now there was no home to which to come.

"It was for them than for us," I'll write them at once," Peggy decided. "They're just what we need. Mary and Bob will have a good time. We always enjoy Fred and Kathleen, and there's little Dick bless his heart, a child is what we want to revive the Christmas spirit."

Again Peggy found herself without hearing of the Christmas chimes: "Joy to the world," was ringing forth, as she approached the department store on her homeward way. But there was no lump in her throat this time and her eyes were clear and steady as she joyfully hastened along, planning for others and winning for herself a Merry Christmas.

He did not go near the siding again until November 16th when he discovered the same car standing there. Great Britain wants more Canadian foodstuffs. The plain fact is that the increase in trade in some of our food exports to the old country is not keeping pace with the growth of demand.

Britain's markets are wide open to Canada. Because of the exhibitions of Canadian products, the activity of our Trade Commissioners, and the effects of our advertising, the British consumer is more familiar with these products than ever before, and consequently more inclined to buy. Good will in Great Britain towards Canadian products never has been at a higher point than now. All the facilities of transportation for all classes of products from Canada to Great Britain have been provided.

Shall we Canadians overlook or neglect the opportunities for increased export trade which are thus laid before us?

Just because domestic markets are good, shall we as producers be so short sighted as to fail to satisfy so large a market which is more favourably inclined towards our products than ever before?

Not yet is there among our producers an adequate realization of the opportunities for increased production which present conditions in the British markets afford.

If you are a producer or dealer in foodstuffs, you can assist to your own profit in gaining a larger share of this market. Almost every community in this country stands to benefit. The result can be attained by:

1. Producing more of the kind of products the British consumer wants.
2. Keeping up a constant supply.
3. Maintaining quality standards.

Through its Commercial Intelligence Service, this Department will render valuable assistance to any exporter. Our Trade Commissioners' Offices in Britain are especially well equipped and strategically placed to handle any export problem on behalf of Canadian exporters. Enquiries regarding British Trade receive prompt attention. Write to the Commercial Intelligence Service, Ottawa.

COFFEE BEFORE BREAKFAST

(By Betty Barclay)

The hostess who wishes to add a bit of hospitality to the entertainment of her holiday guests can do so by serving them coffee in their rooms before breakfast. It is something that is sure to please.

The coffee should be made double strength and served in demi-tasse with or without sugar. Of course it should be hot.

For years it has been the custom in the South to send demi-tasse to the rooms of guests at the time they arise.
They drink the strong fragrant beverage and are ready for more at breakfast. Recently the pre-breakfast demi-tasse or "coffee cocktail" as it is sometimes called has been adopted by a number of hotels and railroad dining cars.

WITH MISTLETOE AND HOLLY

Holly red and mistletoe,
Jolly stockings in a row,
Yuletide cheer and candle glow,
Carols in the morning—oh!
Holly red and mistletoe,
Holly red and mistletoe,
A shining beaming star to show
The Christ Child in a manger joy
And three wise men on camels—oh!
Holly red and mistletoe,
Holly red and mistletoe,
Hear's so full they overflow
With peace on earth to all below,
A merry, merry Christmas—oh!
For holly red and mistletoe.

THIN ICE

Ice has formed once more on river like or slough and as in former years thin ice has given way and there have been deaths from drowning.
Common sense and the experience of other years should dictate caution in the first weeks of the freeze up. However with a moderate number of people around who think it is "sporty" and daring to take a chance there always will be accidents and it is wise to have some knowledge of what to do in such an emergency. There is no time to wring one's hands and about for help. The help must be instantaneous if it is to be of use. Give the victim confidence in your ability to help him, this will prevent him wasting his energy in needless struggles. Then get a fence rail and push it along the ice and across the break where the drowning person may catch it and be pulled to safety. A gate a ladder a hockey stick attached in the centre to a length of scarves or even a human chain lying flat on the surface of the ice each person clasping firmly the ankles of the one ahead may be used for the same purpose. Whatever method is used must be used at once as there is grave danger from shock apart from the danger of drowning.

When parties go skating it would be wise to take stock of possible aids to rescue to be found in the immediate neighborhood of the lake or slough.

Literature on First Aid to the apparently drowned or for shock, may be obtained free from the Canadian Red Cross Society 407 Civic Block Edmonton.

THE SETTLER'S FRIEND

To many a one who crosses the sea to find a home in foreign parts there is a great appeal in the Dominion of Canada with its free life and boundless opportunities. Landing at the ports of St. John or Quebec or Halifax the stranger has the first taste of the new life with all its new ways and conditions as he disembarks at the busy ports. But there is a welcome awaiting him of which he was not aware. Among the many Societies interested in the newcomers and their welfare, there stands pre-eminently the Canadian Red Cross.

Port nurseries are in full swing throughout the year and many a thousand strangers pass through the friendly rooms fragrant with hot tea and filled with tired families of mothers, fathers and travel-stained children. The Red Cross nurses have their hands full with many and varied duties. Refreshments first and foremost for the little folk at small tables.
Advice to the anxious mothers to the care and health of an ailing one.

Assistance to a worried looking father with much baggage and a perplexed look as he thinks of a week on the train with his large family. Life to the nurse at the port holds much of the sterner stuff as she extends to the new Canadians their first words of welcome to this new land. Cards are written bearing the names of each family and their destination. Alberta has had her fair share of these settlers under one scheme or another.
Hence it comes about that many women have written home telling their friends that they got a wonderful reception in Canada from the Red Cross and in describing the various kind services in the Nursery have called the Society by the fitting name of "The Settler's Friend". Visits are paid to families by Red Cross workers and in case of the sickness of the children, steps are taken to see that the necessary care is forthcoming. This further follow-up often results in a life long friendship between the newcomers and their provincial Red Cross and in many cases the friendship shown is returned an hundredfold and thus passed on to others

A WARNING TO PARENTS

The following is reprinted from one of our exchanges and the warning contained therein is truly timely:

"During the past week many of the younger children some as young as four years have made a habit of riding with their hand sleighs in the streets—you could see them almost anywhere—probably unconscious of the danger they are in.

With the streets as slippery as they have been, it is an absolute impossibility for anyone driving an auto to stop on short notice, and why some of these children have not been injured or killed is unexplainable.

Parents apparently are negligent in giving warning to their children regarding playing in the streets—and we presume they turn them loose depending on the car driver to protect them and some day it will be impossible for the auto driver to fulfill this enforced duty."

On several occasions narrow escapes have been noticed by the writer this being particularly the case at the hill on the lane between Fourth and Fifth avenues east. This hill is hidden by a close board fence and the kiddies can neither see or be seen until they come rushing across the roadway, many times within an ace of being run down or causing injury to pedestrians with their rushing bob-

It is granted that inasmuch as the Creator has furnished us with Christmas, the trimmings, viz: presents, etc., will be available for our purchase exactly when we think of them and want them a day or two before the 25th.

The Christmas trade is particularly a trade of service as well as a trade of profit. All good merchants desire to have on hand, especially at Christmas time, the goods their customers desire, at the price they wish to pay for them. The forethought that they have utilized; in buying goods to sell to you is made doubly worthwhile, if by you buying early and liberally you can get the goods you really desire after careful selection.

There is nothing to be gained in last minute purchasing and everything to lose. The week prior to Christmas is a busy week for most merchants and try as they will they are unable to give the care and attention to sales that they would like to give. Certainly "doing your Christmas shopping early" benefits the storekeeper, but it also benefits, in just as large a degree, the Christmas shopper. Volumes have been written about last minute Christmas shopping. The salespeople, especially the salesgirl has been depicted as being so harassed and worn from incessant serving during Christmas week, that by the time Christmas morn actually arrives, she is too much worn out in body and spirit to fully enjoy Christmas. This of course applies to cities. On that score this paper cannot add much to the mass of writings which have preceded it.

In addition to "doing your Christmas Shopping Early" it is wise to do your Christmas mailing early. Fully realizing that the object of Christmas mailing is to have the mail arrive on Christmas morning, yet when one considers the almost superhuman task one imposes on the postal staff during the few days immediately preceding Christmas it is nothing short of marvelous that most of the mail does arrive on time. The piles of mail at Christmas time become mountainous and even with a greatly increased staff, postal workers are greatly to be commended. As far as expressing the Christmas spirit rightly—ten days before Christmas should be his good as too.

ALIAS JOE AND HIS CHRISTMAS

By Clara Ages Hays

A northwestern gale swept dry snow around the corner where old Joe sold papers. Shoppers in heavy wraps hurried past arms loaded with bundles. Children skipped in anticipatory happiness. Old Joe pulled his worn sack coat about him and pulled it tighter with a piece of wire. His hands in dirty outing mittens, were cold. He knocked the backs of them together gingerly and stamped his feet feebly on the icy walk.

"Paper! Evening Journal! Paper!" he droned monotonously. Mentally he figured his gain. Enough for a fifteen cent bed and sandwiches, maybe. But tomorrow's being Christmas nobody'd buy papers. He wanted to get enough to buy a little something to—his old face took on a foolish and shamed grin—maybe to make him happy and to make him forget just what an old beggar was. Then he wouldn't have to eat so much other. A vagabond. That's what he was. Never been much else for years.

"Well, hello Santa Claus!" a young voice hailed him merrily. "Old Joe turned, 'Paper!'"

A laughing, well-dressed couple faced him. "Why Jack?" the girl mischievously remonstrated.

"How are yuh, Uncle George?" her irreverent companion continued. "Old Joe grinned sheepishly behind his beard. 'Wanna paper?'"

"I say Fran!" the youth exclaimed. "Here's our Christmas." He drew her farther away and whispered. They returned. "Hey how'd you like to come to come to our place for Christmas?"

"They talked sometime before they convinced old Joe that they meant it. Too cold to be proud, he even submitted to the bath and hair cut that Jack paid for. In a suit too small for Jack's father, Joe came abashed into the kitchen and ate.

"You see, Fran's my sister," explained Jack. "The folks went off on their Christmas spree and left us. We told them we'd do something rare for our celebration."

Jack and Frances had eaten down town. It was late. Joe was given some blankets and put on a cot in the corner of Jack's long room. In the night, Joe awakened suddenly. Painfully he raised and listened. "Hey you—Uncle George! Goah, I'm sick!" Jack moaned. Old Joe turned the light on as he was told and called Frances. She wailed "I can't come! I'm sick! I've been trying to call some one. The next morning the doctor on his second call turned to an old man with a neatly trimmed beard and clean suit. "They're all right now, with the nurse here. It was something they ate last night."

Jack was better. He smiled feebly. "Well, the joke was on us, wasn't it? Uncle George? You did us the favor of getting the doctor here and running errands in the night. Before you go, step in the closet there and get my case."

Joe popped rheumatically out of the closet, carrying not a case but an old enlargement. "Wh—Whar'd ye git this?" he demanded, hands trembling.

"Oh, that's why we call you Uncle George. You see it's a bad habit we have to—sort of tease Dad. That is his brother George. He ran away when he was young. Nobody's heard of him since. Dad says he smart and sure to make his mark somewhere. One of these days he says Uncle George will drive up in a Rolls Royce with enough hundred dollar bills to paper our house. Dad's actually proud of him. We are too. But we call—different fellows Uncle George to make Dad—well you see—"

Jack stopped in embarrassment. Old Joe nodded. "Well, I gotta be goin'!"

"Wait! There's some money in my case. I want to pay you."

"Naw, just come down and buy my papers of me if you wanna help. I'm a gonna start savin' up to buy a stand."

Outside Joe's trembling hand opened an almost empty purse, and pulled out the small original of the enlargement upstairs. A year contradicted the sheepish grin. "Wal it's a good thing the fellows took to calling me Joe lately stead of George," he told himself.

STRESS SAFETY

AMONG WORKERS

MONTREAL—A further step to encourage ideas and methods of safety among railroad workers in Canada is marked by the announcement of two new awards for competition by Col. C. A. Hodgetts, C.M.G., Director General of the St. John Ambulance Association. Col. Hodgetts presented first aid trophies to winners in first aid competitions among the men of the men of the Canadian National Railways shops at Point St. Charles in the Dominion, which have not won a senior trophy, will be up for competition next year. Dr. Keith Hutchinson announced at the same time that arrangements were being made for the donation of a trophy in memory of his father Dr. Alex. Hutchinson from the Medical Officer of the Grand Trunk System who died recently. Dr. Hutchinson was one of the pioneers of first aid in Canada.

HINTS FOR CHRISTMAS GOODIES

(By Betty Barclay)

HOME-MADE CANDIES FOR CHRISTMAS

Delight the children with some home-made candy on Christmas Day. This may be prepared before the preparation of the other Christmas goodies begins and will add greatly to your display of edibles. Furthermore, sugar is a particularly valuable food at this time of year for it is a concentrated source of that internal warmth which is even more necessary than a sweater or overcoat in protecting active children from the biting cold of the months that are ahead of us. Here are two recipes for unusual home-made candies which you will wish to try again and again.

Strawberry Luncheon Patties
2 cups granulated sugar
1/2 cup cold water
1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar
Dissolve sugar in water on back of range. Place thermometer in syrup and bring to boiling point, stirring well. When the boiling begins cease all stirring but wipe down sides of saucepan with moist brush or bit of dampened cheesecloth. Add cream of tartar cover saucepan for a moment then boil quickly until mixture will form a soft ball when dropped in water from spoon. Pour out on lightly greased platter, cool until syrup can be handled then fold rapidly back and forth until creamy. Knead to smooth compact but soft mass.

The strawberry jam should be added in the proportion of two tablespoons to each cup of the mixture. Melt the mixture to a semi-liquid state, then stir in the jam rubbed through a sieve. Stir well while the final mixture is stiffening. Drop the patties from the end of a spoon or make into balls between the palms of the hand and flatten by pressing gently.

Corn Relish Salad
1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
1 cup boiling water
1/2 cup cold water
3 tablespoons vinegar
1 1/2 cups corn, cooked
1 green pepper, cooked
1 pimiento, chopped
1 tablespoon onion, grated
Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add cold water, vinegar and salt. Chill. When slightly thickened fold in corn, pepper, pimiento and onion. Turn into mold. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce. Garnish with mayonnaise. Serves 8.

Oatmeal Drop Cakes
2-3 cups butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1-4 cup milk
2 cups rolled oats
2 1/2 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon nutmeg

Its patented locking joints make it possible to quickly assemble the Rod. Has substantial handle with solid grip. Packed in partitioned canvas bag.
Come in sizes, 3, 3 1/2, 4, 4 1/2, 5, 5 1/2 ft.

When Ordering State Number or Name of Article Desired

1 cup chopped seeded raisins
Cream butter, add sugar, eggs well beaten, milk, and rolled oats. Mix and sift dry ingredients. Add flour mixture to first mixture, thoroughly mix. Drop by spoonfuls on a greased baking pan and bake in a rather hot oven. This makes 32 to 36 cookies.

TOMATOES STUFFED WITH VEAL
Wipe and remove thin slices from stem end of six medium-size tomatoes. Take out seeds and pulp sprinkle inside of tomatoes with salt. Cook two tablespoons butter with one-half tablespoon finely-chopped onion for five minutes. Add one-half cup chopped cold veal, one-half cup stale bread crumbs, tomato pulp and salt and pepper to taste. Cook five minutes then add one egg slightly beaten; cook one minute and fill tomatoes with mixture. Place in buttered pan sprinkle with buttered cracker crumbs and bake for twenty minutes in a hot oven.

GRAPEFRUIT AND FIG SALAD
3 large grapefruit
A few preserved figs
1 lemon for dressing
Peel fruit, remove membrane from each section cut meat into pieces and arrange on crisp lettuce leaves with figs. Serve with dressing made of lemon or lime juice a dash of paprika and a suggestion of powdered sugar. (One teaspoon to a half cup of dressing)

PLAN FOR MORE VEGETABLES NEXT YEAR

(Experimental Farms Note)
Vegetables are so much tastier and more wholesome when fresh from the garden, that every farm home should have home-grown vegetables. A good garden will save money, improve the health of the family, and provide more real pleasure than any other acre on the farm.

Plans should be made in the autumn for next season's vegetable garden. Locate it near to the farm building that many of the vegetables can be grown in long straight rows with space enough between for a horse cultinator. Select a rich, warm, sandy loam soil, as this will meet the requirements of most of the vegetables to be grown. On many farms the potato or root field will most nearly meet the requirements. When the site is chosen make a definite plan with so many feet of row for each sort of vegetable; one hundred feet is usually enough for the average family for many kinds, and much more than is required for radish, lettuce or parsnip and much longer rows should be grown of vegetables that can be stored for winter.

Deep autumn ploughing should be used to cover a heavy dressing of barnyard manure for most vegetables with the exception of tomatoes for ripening, which do not require extra manuring. For best results the soil should be worked to good tilth early to increase the fertility well rotted manure can be dug in with a digging fork. The following seeds are some which can be sown early in the open: beets, carrots, lettuce, onions, parsnips and peas; seeds to be sown in the open after danger from frost is over: beans, corn, cucumbers, potatoes, pumpkin and squash; seeds to be started in hot-beds: cabbage, cauliflower and celery. Many other vegetables can be added if there is land and time to take care of them.

CHRISTMAS SALADS

Apple-O Salad
Peel and slice oranges rejecting all white membrane. Cut wedged-shaped slices from red apples without paring. Arrange on lettuce-covered salad plates, using alternate slices of orange and apple.

Centered Circle
Peel oranges and grapefruit and divide into segments rejecting all white skin. Arrange a circle of orange segments on a lettuce-covered salad plate and fill center with grapefruit segments.

CINNAMON APPLES SUPREME

1 package vanilla junket
1 pint milk
6 apples
1 cup sugar
1-3 cup water
3 tablespoons red cinnamon can dies
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Peel and core apples and place in baking pan. Make a syrup by boiling the sugar, water and cinnamon can dies together for 5 minutes; add lemon juice. Pour syrup over apples and bake until tender basting several times until they are cooked. Then place apples in individual dishes adding a little syrup. When cooled and the syrup has jellied prepare vanilla junket according to direction on package and fill dishes. Let stand in a warm room until firm.

THE DUAL PURPOSE COW

(Experimental Farms Note)

Some have questioned the existence of such an animal as the dual purpose cow. However, the fact remains that many Shorthorns of good beef conformation produce sufficient milk to return a profit to their owners aside from the value of their calves which make good feeders. These qualities constitute dual purpose stock and by reason of such qualities many farmers prefer this strain of Shorthorn to any other class of cattle. No intelligent breeder of such stock pretends to compete with the dairy breeds in average production of milk per head, nor as a rule does he pretend to compete with the straight beef breeds in the show ring, but he is a strong contender for highest position as measured by net returns at the end of the year.

The Shorthorn herd at the Dominion Experimental Station, Scott, Saskatchewan was started in 1921 with no outstanding producers. During the eight succeeding years two cows have made records approximating 800 pounds; six cows have over 6000 pounds to their credit and eleven have made records of over 5000 pounds. The herd has been inspected by a great many visitors and no person has questioned the suitability of these animals for beef and waiting lists are on file continually for breeding stock. The records referred to were made without undue forcing. During the winter months the meat mixture used consisted of 500 pounds oat chop, 100 pounds bran and 100 pounds oil cake meal. From six to ten pounds of this mixture was fed per head per day supplemented with prairie hay and sunflower silage. When on pasture in summer a light feed of oat chop was given at the time of milking. The meat mixture for 1929-30 has been altered for winter feeding and is made up as follows: 300 pounds bran, 300 pounds oat chop, 150 pounds barley chop and 200 pounds oil cake meal.

CHRISTMAS CUSTOMS

Does the Christmas tree owe its existence to the Egyptians? Several authorities favor this view and the fact remains that in Germany where the Christmas tree as it is known now really originated families which were too poor to buy a tree sometimes use a decorated pyramid as the centre of their gift giving. In this connection it is interesting to note that if Queen Victoria had married an Englishman the gaily decorated tree would still be more or less of an unknown quantity in England. Prince Albert of Saxe Coburg being commonly credited with having introduced the tree in his adopted country where it became very popular.

Gift Giving
The gift giving habit is still more obscure in its origin. The giving of present was one of the features of the Roman saturnalia celebrated at the winter solstice but there are not a few authorities who ascribe the custom which poses a perennial problem to a patriarch of the Christian Church St. Nicholas.

St. Nicholas was known to have been a Bishop of Myra in Lycia but his authentic history does not go much further than that. It is claimed however that when a certain father of three daughters found himself in the predicament of not being able to supply suitable dowries for the three sisters and therefore not in a position to marry them the venerable saint came to his aid with secret gifts. This is supposed to have originated the habit of secret gift giving on the eve of St. Nicholas' Day, December 6th. In the course of time the custom came to be associated with Christmas Day.

The First Stocking

In passing it might be noted that in a sixth century convent it was customary for the young lady boarders to hang a silk stocking on the door of the apartment of the abess on Christmas Eve. The next morning they were summoned to witness the results of the liberality of the saint who we are told had bountifully filled the stockings with sweets.

Santa Claus appears to have come over to America with the Dutch colonists in the seventeenth century. His name derived from the Dutch San Nicholas, indicated his connection with the kindly bishop. Where he got his reindeer from is a matter for conjecture both at that time and all down the years.

A sun-dial set amidst the flowers Proclaims while time endures
My face records but sunny hours
What can you say of yours?
A question fair enough is this
For you and me together:
Do we reflect the sunshine's kiss,
Or days of cloudy weather?

ALBERTA'S CHRISTMAS
IS MADE VERY HAPPY

They stood in the doorway of the Immigration Hall. Mike Mychuck and his young wife. Mike looked clumsy and stupid and carried all his worldly possessions in a sack. Stasia, with eyes cast down, clung to her husband's hand. She had a bright yellow kerchief tied over her hair and her wide Slav mouth trembled as she tried to smile.

"What is your name," asked the man in charge.
The heavy face of the Pole showed no expression of understanding but seemed to realize a question had been asked, answered in a deep gentle tone "Alberta."

The interpreter said they talked a dialect he was not very familiar with but he could understand a little of what they said. The only English word the man knew was "Alberta." This he used for everything. His name was Mike Mychuck and the girl was his wife. They had their certificate of marriage from a village in Poland.

There were few immigrants and as Christmas was only a few days off things were at a standstill.

"What are we to do with them," was the question the officials asked themselves over and over again. There was no farm work at that time of the year and the condition of the girl was apparent.

"It would be cruel to turn them out in this freezing cold, to shift for themselves," said the Red Cross Lady. "We must get in touch with some Polish people and in the meantime they will just have to wait."

They sat on the couch in the corner of the room. The man stupidly looking around and the girl seldom raising her eyes from the floor as she held to her husband, entirely content and meekly willing to abide by any thing he thought best.

The Red Cross Lady who had the Grace of God in her heart, made no language to communicate with the young thing who was to become a mother in such a short time. She just put her hand on the girl's head and said, "My dear," Stasia's hand fluttered out toward her with a dumb appeal.

"There is no language that transcends all tongues; a language that needs no interpreter to translate—the language of love. Mike's love for his young wife shone through his stupid face like a light from within and the Red Cross Lady's love for humanity met them on level ground."

The spirit of Christmas was abroad in the land. Even the women who represented their several clubs and who begrudged the few hours a week they gave to help their country's citizens felt a sympathy for these young foreigners in such unfamiliar surroundings.

Stasia's shy sweet smile won friends for her in spite of the fact that she did not know one word of the language spoken around her.

Mike went out one morning and secured a job shoveling snow. It was a ruse to every one at the hall who he was able to make himself understood when the only English word he could say was "Alberta." He came back that night with his wages in his hand. The pride in Stasia's face and the look of puzzled confidence spoke louder than words.

"I got in touch with the priest of the Greek church and he said he would see that they were placed with some Polish people. The few dollars the man can earn will help," said the interpreter.

"There will be some kind of a celebration here. We will let them stay until after Christmas and then they can go. They will feel more at home by that time" said the man in charge who was beginning to feel the spirit of "goodwill to all men."

Stasia sat all day at the window watching for Mike. What she saw from there was a picture that had no meaning. At times a sweet tremulous smile played around her lips, but usually she just sat looking at the scene with an impassive gaze. There was a day while she was watching out the window that a tear ran down her warm cheek. It was that witching hour of twilight when all the world pauses. The lights of the city came out in a galaxy of splendor but she saw them dimly as through a mist, for she was homesick for the land of her birth. In far-off Poland they were watching for the witch on broomstick who was supposed to appear on Christmas eve. Her family were keeping their Christmas in a distant part of the world. Did they miss her? They would be breaking the water between them. The "Star-Man" would be coming. Soon the feasting would begin. They would be scattering the straw under the table and a chair would be left vacant for the Holy Child. Then the boys would come in with their stars all alight, singing carols.

She was only a child far away from home in a country where the customs were unknown. This strange Canada where she had come to take a chance with the rest and make a home for her husband and herself. Not a morsel of food had passed her lips that day for in Poland Christmas eve is a strict fast day until the first star appears. Upon this sad picture came Mike. His step was the step of a free man. The servile stoop was gone and his shoulders had squared. Under his arm he carried a cradle. He strode straight across the floor and Stasia without moving seemed to go to meet him. He first scattered a handful of straw on the floor and then put the cradle down in front of her, speaking to her gently all the while.

The scattering of straw under a cradle at this Christmas time is old custom in Poland, being symbolical of the Nativity and the stable at Bethlehem. Mike talked and Stasia quietly rocked the cradle back and forth as she listened, both unconscious of their dreary surroundings.

The quiet content that seemed to come to Stasia was part of her condition. It worried her not at all that she was to pass through her travail in a strange country—in a foreign land. She was insured to suffering in silence but the hour came when she stood up and hurried from the stairs and face twisted and suddenly white with pain.

The quiet girl who sat against the wall was gone. The efficient nurse of the Victorian Order said everything was "fine."

Stasia's little son was born in the early hours of Christmas morning. There was no fuss—no noise—he came into the world as quietly as his young mother had lived.

When "Hark! the Herald Angels Sing" came pealing across the snow from the churches, this Polish Madonna clasped to her breast her first-born, her Canadian son.

No Wise Men came from the East bearing gifts, as they did many thousand years ago when another man-child was born in lowly surroundings in Bethlehem, but in the door of the room of the immigration hall stood the interested group of people. The doctor the nurse and the Red Cross Lady. The interpreter removed his hat in involuntary homage but the little family did not notice him. Mike was on his knees upon the bare floor by the cot with his big muscular arm thrown protectively around his wife and babe. He spoke not a word for this was beyond his vocabulary and the lump in his throat threatened to choke him. Upon Stasia's calm sweet face shone the holy radiance of motherhood.

Some hours later when the interpreter asked Mike what he was going to name his son he answered without a moment's hesitation "Alberta."

THE STAR HAS LEARNED THAT --

BORN--To Mr and Mrs G. McLean of Fabyan, at the Wainwright municipal hospital on December 17th, a girl.

BORN--To Mr and Mrs P. Patterson of Greenfield, at the Wainwright municipal hospital, on December 14th, a girl (stillborn)

BORN--To Mr and Mrs J. Fralick, at the Wainwright municipal hospital on December 16th, a boy

The superintendent of the hospital wishes to acknowledge eight quart sealers of fruit for the fruit shower from Mrs Fred Gordon during the past week.

The old-fashioned father who was up at daybreak, now has a daughter who is still up at daybreak! Nevertheless a fire might start and not be discovered until it had such a good hold that it could not be extinguished. Better keep your property insured with Joe Welch. All losses paid promptly

The Gilt Edge Park association have now acquired the old Plaxtonville school building a representative group of members having persuaded Mr Geo Babb to re-sell it to them. Mr Babb had previously bought the building from the school board when the new school was erected. The community turned out in force with three tractors and plenty of horses and men and it is now on the park grounds where it will be used for a community hall. Another good example of community spirit proving progress!

We are sorry to know that Miss Nellie Carroll, who last week slipped on the telephone exchange steps and hurt her back, is still confined to her bed.

It may be healthy and all that but the temperature of nearly thirty below zero which prevailed over the week end was truly "some cold" for comfort!

The Wainwright branch of the Canadian Legion B.E.S.L. will hold a whisky drive in the Masonic hall on Friday December 27th at eight p.m. Good prices; everyone welcome. Admission 50¢ each

After a trip to Toronto to visit his father who has been very sick Mr P E Wilkey returned home at the week end.

Build with wood for warmth and beauty; your doors and windows will be tighter. Wood is a non-conductor of cold and frost. Use plenty of paper and "tan-test" insulation and you will save your fuel. Come in and talk over that new home with Joe Welch at the Atlas yard

For the first time in a hundred years the Bank of Montreal has made a change in the design of its annual calendar. Instead of their usual conventional design, this year it bears a reproduction of the famous pastel by Mr. J. M. Swan, R. A., a lion and a lioness being the subject of the artist.

After what was quite an epidemic of disease the Town of Vermilion is now practically free from mumps

Mrs Catherine Horne moved her family into the Plaxton house on Fifth avenue east over the week end

Waiting until you have only the last few lumps of coal in the bin is a "fuelish" mistake at this season of the year. Take home a load of Black Diamond coal from the Atlas yard next time you are in town.

Advices from the postal department accentuate the fact that A.L.L. mailing should be done early as possible even for local deliveries; parcels can be marked "Do not open till Christmas" It is also pointed out that cards and envelopes less than three inches by four inches are not acceptable through the mails.

We learn that after the Christmas holidays at the town school, Miss Coral Rankin will return to take charge of grade VI which has been under the tuition of Miss Dimond (substitute) since mid-summer

Ellis's barber shop on Main street now boasts a new marceller in the person of Miss Frances Koenen of Edmonton. This young lady we learn has had great experience in her work and comes highly recommended. The new phone number is 134

When down town for your shopping drop in and enjoy a cup of hot chocolate at the Standard Pharmacy

The new "Weston" machine for testing and locating troubles on the telephone circuits has been installed at the local exchange during the past week. This will simplify matters when service goes off as to where the trouble is.

During the past week the C-Op. shipped three carloads of nice cattle to the city stockyards. They will not be shipping again until after the New Year, Monday, January 6th being the date.

Mr and Mrs J. Cuthbertson and their little family left on Saturday last for Vancouver where Mr Cuthbertson will spend a holiday with relatives for the next month. Mrs Cuthbertson and the children will not likely be back until possibly the end of February.

Your plate glass windows cost a lot of money, and are a great advertising asset for your business. In new buildings, from settling, swelling frames, pressure or strain, and many other causes, they are liable to crack. We insure against this, and in case of the slightest crack we replace the whole pane at no expense or trouble to you. Let us quote you rates on plate glass insurance, the low price will surprise you. Joe Welch, phone 57.

Get your Christmas supplies at home. Our merchants are all waiting to serve you with splendid seasonal goods; read the ads and profit by it!

Mary had a little dress. So neat, so bright, so airy; It never showed a speck of dirt

But showed a lot of Mary! 'Twas Mary's skirt was short, but not any shorter than many would be if their car or their home burnt tonight. Play safe; keep well insured. Joe Welch handles the insurance you need

Mr Neil McLean, K.C. of Edmonton, has been appointed to the advisory board of the Sun Life Assurance Co. acting in the interests of the company's business in the West

Mr Ruben Helmke, who has been here all summer left on Saturday to spend the Christmas holidays with friends and relatives at Windmere, N. Dakota. He expects to be away for two or three weeks.

Don't forget the Girls' Gaiety Club "Snow Ball" Dance on Thursday December the 19th in the Masonic Hall.

At a meeting of the local W.I., held at the home of Mrs J. Robinson last week, a pen and pencil set was the presentation made to Mrs Robinson in appreciation of her work for that organization.
